Subject: Duwamish Superfund Site

---

Dear Kay Morrison and EPA Region 10 Involvement Staff,

I live on unceded Duwamish Land. The Duwamish River used to provide sacred water and life. Through environmentally racist industrialization, the Duwamish's water and land is a toxic superfund site. As a department who states they are for environmental justice, I urge you to clean up all 177 acres. To avoid the 5 acres, is to violate the 2014 ROD agreements and indigenous rights. While I understand the government trying to save money, this should not come at the expense of river communities.

Are the polluters of the Duwamish held accountable for their negative externalities? How is the EPA trying to undo environmental racism? Even if the Duwamish River no longer is a Superfund, what will the EPA do to ensure communities can thrive in the future?

With gratitude,
